

Emerging Issues in Legal Aspects of Business

Edited by

Prof. Seema Joshi

Dr. Ramesh Sardar

Dr. Sameer Narkhede

School of Management Studies,
North Maharashtra University, Jalgaon - 425001 (M.S.) India

Emerging Issues in Legal Aspects of Business

Editors

Prof. Seema Joshi

Dr. Ramesh Sardar

Dr. Sameer Narkhede

Editorial Office : School of Management studies,
North Maharashtra University, Jalgaon - 425001 (M.S.) India

© Editors

First Edition : 2nd January, 2015

ISBN : 978-81-925956-7-2

Published & Printed by : Varad Prakashan, Jalgaon
V, 147, MIDC, Jalgaon ☎:0257-2232438

All rights are reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronics, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without prior permission.

Disclaimer: School of Management Studies, Publication and Editors here by do not take any responsibility for any mistake or errors built-in in the content of articles by the authors may be in the form figure, graph & data used.

17	Foreign Direct Investment In Indian Retail Sector : Legal Aspects And Challenges Prof. Bhagyshri R. Salave	78 - 81
18	Fdi In Indian Retail Sector: Legal Issues And Challenges Dr. Kalpana P. Nandanwar & Mr. Chetankumar H. Mahajan	82 - 85
19	Regulatory Frame Work And Legal Issues Involved In FDI Pertaining To Retail Sector Dr. A. M. Raut	86 - 91
20	Legal Issues Involved In Fdi In Retail Sector Dr. Yogesh Wasudeo Bhowte	92 - 96
21	Recent Developments In Employee Welfare And Social Security Laws In India Kranti Shashikant Patil	97 - 99
22	Legal Aspects Of Employees Welfare And Social Security In India Ms. Kshirsagar Purnima B.	100 - 105
23	A Study On Impact Of Social Security Acts On Employee M. K. Godbole & Pushpalata S.patil	106 - 109
24	A Study On Recent Developments In Employee Welfare And Social security Laws and Its Impact On Manufacturing Sector Of Pune Region" Md. Saad Siddiqui & Ms. Preeti Sharma	110 - 116
25	Legal Aspects Influencing Employee Job Satisfaction In India-an Introductory Approach" Sarika Ramesh Paturkar & Dr. G.h Barhate	117 - 120
26	Sustainable Employees Social Security Laws And Its Impact On Productivity Of Employees. Sonali Nimba Wagh	121 - 123
27	Recent Development In Employee Welfare & Social Security In India -new Changes In Pf Rules & Effects. Mr. Virendra Wankhede & Dr. Mohammed Abdul Raffey	124 - 129
28	Emerging Legal Issues And Challenges In E-governance In India. Ashish J. Ingle	130 - 133
29	ICT Market And Regulatory Trends Dr. Pavitra Patil	134 - 137
30	Legal And Ethical Issues In Growing E-commerce In India Dr. Rahul Kulkarni	138 - 141
31	Global Communication System With Reference To Cyber Crimes Pri.Dr.B.Y.K.Reddy & Prof.Dr.vijeta Singh	142 - 146
32	Legal Aspects And Security Issues In Cloud Computing Mr. Mahesh K. Bhavsar	147 - 152

AN INTRODUCTORY APPROACH

Sarika Ramesh Bahurkar & Prof. (Dr.) G.H. Sarhate*

1. Research Scholar, Unkari's Department of Management Science
Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar Marathwada University, Aurangabad (M.S.), India.
2. Associate Professor, C. D. Jain College of Commerce, Shrirampur, Dist - Ahmednagar, (M.S.), India.

Abstract

One of the most pressing problem facing organizations today is how to motivate employees to work more productively and to increase their feelings of satisfaction, involvement, and commitment. All around us we see examples of shoddy and imperfect work in products. This paper aims at studying the factors which are responsible for employee job satisfaction. The factors which are the probable causes behind employee job satisfaction can be broadly divided into three broad categories. Behavioral, organizational and environmental factors. This paper focuses on all of these categories and attempts to find the relation between these factors and employee job satisfaction.

Keywords: - Environment, Job satisfaction, work-condition, commitment etc

1. Introduction

In a labour surplus and capital hungry country like India jobs are very important to individuals. They help to determine standards of living, places of residence, status and even one's sense of self worth. Jobs are important to organizations because they are the means of accomplishing organizational objectives. Technological advances and competitive pressures may often force an organization to put more emphasis on characteristics of successful performance rather than on standard jobs duties and tasks etc. Frederick W. Taylor (1916), one of the pioneers, believed that workers' motivation was due largely to their interest in money. He also proposed that the most satisfying situation would be one in which a worker could make the most money with the least effort. Both productivity and satisfaction would result. If workers were given fair wages and work that could be done quickly without excessive fatigue. The main objective of this study is to find the relation between behavioral, environmental and organizational factors and job satisfaction in India.

2. Literature Survey

For a few decades, many researches have been carried out about job satisfaction and its components. Many researchers and administrators have noticed the importance of job satisfaction on a variety of organizational variables (Chu et al., 2003). In particular, we know that dissatisfied employees are likely to leave their jobs. Thus, the understanding of employee job satisfaction and its contributing variables are important for any organization to exist and prosper (Mrayyan, 2005). Job satisfaction is simply defined as the affective orientation that an employee has toward his or her work (Price, 2001). In other words, it is an affective reaction to a job that results from the comparison of perceived outcomes with those that are desired (Kam, 1998). In short, job satisfaction describes the feelings, attitudes or preferences of individuals regarding work (Chen, 2008). Furthermore, it is the degree to which employees enjoy their jobs (McCloskey and McCain, 1987).

And also, it is possible to see a number of theories developed to understand its nature in literature. Vroom (1964) need/value fulfillment theory states that job satisfaction is negatively related to the discrepancy between individual needs and the extent to which the job supplies these needs. On the other hand, Porter and Lawler (1968) collect the influences on job satisfaction in two groups of internal and external satisfactory factors. According to them, internal satisfactory factors are related to the work itself (such as feeling of independence, feeling of achievement, feeling of victory, self-esteem, feeling of control and other similar feeling obtained from work).

whereas external satisfactory factors are not directly related to work itself (such as good relationships with colleagues, high salary, good welfare and utilities). So, the influences on job satisfaction can be also divided into work-related and employee-related factors (Glisson and Durick, 1988). Job satisfaction has been the most frequently investigated variable in organizational behavior (Spector, 1997). Job satisfaction varies and researchers, for example Peretomode (1991) and Whawo (1993), have suggested that the higher the prestige of the job, the greater the job satisfaction. Many workers, however, are satisfied in even the least prestigious jobs. That is, they simply like what they do. In any case, job satisfaction is as individual as one's feelings or state of mind. Job satisfaction can be influenced by a variety of legal aspects, for example, the quality of one's relationship with their supervisor, the quality of the physical environment in which they work, the degree of fulfillment in their work, etc.

However, there is no strong acceptance among researchers, consultants, etc., that increased job satisfaction produces improved job performance. In fact, improved job satisfaction can sometimes decrease job performance (McNamara, [n.d]; War, 1998). Frederick Herzberg's two factor theory (also known as Motivator Hygiene Theory) attempts to explain satisfaction and motivation in the workplace. This theory states that satisfaction and dissatisfaction are driven by different factors: motivation and hygiene factors, respectively. An employee's motivation to work is continually related to job satisfaction of a subordinate. Motivation can be seen as an inner force that drives individuals to attain personal and organization goals (Hoskinson, Porter, & Wrensch).

A. Work Environment

Stress: When negative stress is high it reduces job satisfaction. When a job does not correspond with an individual's personal life, or is the source of anxiety and confusion, it's stressful work conditions. Work places that are not in normal conditions allowing employee to do their job properly, in work places where there is not sufficient conditions employee motivation level decreases and such a situation affects employee job satisfaction negatively.

B. Organizational Aspects

Fair rewarding: Employees are more satisfied when their works are fairly rewarded.

Promotion: Promotion opportunities influence job satisfaction in different ways. The reason in conducting promotion in many different ways. For example, "employees promoted based on their work experience" are less satisfied with their jobs than "employees which are promoted on the basis of their work results".

Opportunities: Job related opportunities increase employee satisfaction. For example, a job with a good opportunity to participate in projects, presenting competition and responsibility increases satisfaction.

C. Behavioral Aspects

Adequate authority: Giving more freedom to employees in their job increases their satisfaction.

Salary: Material rewards are very important in job satisfaction. Money meets luxury needs and wants of people along with their fundamental needs. Generally, employees accept salary as supervisors' reward for the work they have performed.

Supervisors: Managers are one of the main factors which affect job satisfaction. Supervisors interested in employees' work, assisting them in solution of their work related problems, build the formal and informal relationships together with the formal ones and, therefore, increase job satisfaction.

III. Research Methodology

The research design used in the research is descriptive research. Data is collected via structured questionnaire, a good structured instrument for collection of data. The research method used is quantitative method. The research technique used is Questionnaire. The data is collected using primary data. Data is collected via survey method. Sample size is 150.

Research Model developed based on literature survey:

Research Model developed based on literature survey:

Fig 1: Research Model

IV. Research hypothesis

- H1: There is significant impact of work environment on job satisfaction
- H2: There is significant impact of organizational a factor on job satisfaction.
- H3: There is significant impact of behavioral factors on job satisfaction.

V. Data Analysis

The type of analysis used in this research is regression analysis. It is the determination of a statistical relationship between two or more variables. One variable is independent whereas the other is dependent variable. Since, in this research we had to study the relationship of various aspects with job satisfaction that is why we have applied regression analysis. Here job satisfaction is the dependent variable and work environment, organizational aspects and behavioral aspects are independent variables.

VI. Interpretation

It has been found that all the three aspects i.e. behavioral, organizational and environmental aspects have a significant impact on employee job satisfaction.

VII. Conclusion

This study focuses on impact of various Legal aspects on job satisfaction. It has been found out hat all the three variables that are environmental, organizational and behavioral aspects have a positive impact on job satisfaction. It means that if the employees are treated equally and fairly and they are properly supervised, their level of satisfaction can be increased towards their job. Organizational aspects will thus contribute to job satisfaction. Hence from this research it can be concluded that organizational aspects are the most important aspect for job satisfaction of the employees in a company.

References

- 1) AGHO, A.O., MUELLER, C.W., PRICE, J.L., "Determinants of Employee Job Satisfaction: An Empirical Test of a Causal Model", Human Relations, 46: 1007-1027, 1993.
- 2) Porwal N, Sharma S. 'Job satisfaction and emotional stability', Indian Psychological Review', Vol 28, pp1-4, 1985.
- 3) Spector, P.E. Job Satisfaction. In: Application, Assessment Causes and Consequences. Sage, London, 1997
- 4) Locke, E.A. "Job Satisfaction and Job Performance: A Theoretical Analysis", Organizational Behavior and Human Performance, 5, pp.484-500, 1970.
- 5) Payne, R.L., Fineman, S., Wall, T.D. 1976. "Organization climate and job satisfaction: A conceptual analysis", Organizational Behaviour and Human Performance, Vol. 16, pp. 45-62.

6) G. K. "The job satisfaction-job performance relationship: A qualitative and quantitative review". Psychological Bulletin, 127,376-407, 2001.

7) Locke, E.A. "The nature and causes of job satisfaction". In M.D.Dunnette (Ed), Handbook of industrial and organizational psychology (pp. 1297-1350). Chicago: Rand McNally, 1976.

8) Maslow AH: "Theory of Human Motivation". Psychological Review 1943,50:370-396.

9) Herzberg FW, Mausner B, Snyderman B: "The Motivation to Work New York": Wiley, 1957.

10) Herzberg, Frederick. "The Human Need for Work, World Executive Digest", Vol. IV, No. 12 1983

PORTER, L.W., LAWLER, E.E., "Managerial Attitudes and Performance", Homewood, IL: Irwin. 1968.

11) Maslow, A. H. "Motivation and Personality". 2nd edition, New York: Harper and Row, 1970.